Governor Requests Ordering Out of Another C. A. Battalion. With Major Arthur N. Nash in Command-K. of C. Delegation at Providence-State Senate Grants Women Right to Vote for Presidential Electors-Lobster Season

Judge Charles F. Stearns, an associate Justice of the supreme court of Rhode Island, has handed down his opinion in the case of Stephen A. Pooler against the town of Johnston. The question of law involved in the case is one of general interest throughout the state, and especially in Westerly. The declaration alleges that the plaintiff's automobile went off a bank at the roadside because the town had falled to maintain a railing to prevent such an accident. A strip along the centre of the highway was constructed by the state and known as a state

The town of Johnston filed a plea to the effect that the highway was constructed and cared for by the state board of public roads and contended that it was not liable for the damages caused by the accident. The plaintiff demurred to the plea on the ground that the defect in the highway was entirely outside of the part of the highway constructed and improved by the state, and that the town is still liable to keep that part of the highway which was defective in repair and safe for travel and to provide a rail at the side of the road.

This demurrer to the plea was over-

This demurrer to the pica was over-ruled by the superior court, the plain-tiff took an exception and the case went to the supreme court. Judge Stearns discusses in the opin-ion the legislation on the statute books ion the legislation on the statute books concerning the building and mainte-nance of state roads, especially en-deavoring to ascertain the intent of the legislature. Summing up his conclusions he says:

"The intention of the legislature seems to be clear, that state roads should be directly under the control of the state and that, with the exception of the removal of snow and ice, the responsibility for the proper repair and maintenance of the entire state highway resets upon the state. pair and maintenance of the entire state highway rests upon the state, and not partly upon the state and part-ly upon the towns and cities, as claim-ed by the plaintiff. * * * Our conclu-sion, therefore, is that the town was under no obligation to keep in repair or to provide a railing for the part of the highway in question."
